WOMAN ATTEMPTS SUICIDE SUNDAY

Mrs. Effie Fields Inhales Gas Fumes.

DOMESTIC TROUBLES CAUSE

Husband Breaks in the Door.

After Making Threats of Suicide Woman Locks Herself in Her Room and Prepares to Die—Restorative Administered and Today she is Recovering.

Following a domestic altercation, Mrs. Effie Fields, wife of Sylvester N. Fields, a railway mail clerk, who resides on Belmont street, attempted to commit suicide by inhaling gas and fumes from a chloroform bottle Sunday afternoon about two o'clock. The timely arrival of her husband and neighbors saved her life. Her condition is much improved today. There is no doubt but that she will recover.

After having words with her husband, Mrs. Fields threatened to leave him but was reconciled by neighbor women, who left her thinking the trouble was at an end. However, before going to her room, she remarked "I'll not be here for many days."

A short time after she had entered her room on the second floor of the house, her husband heard groans and attempted to enter the room but found the door locked. He hastened to a neighbor's house and asked for a ladder, saying, "That woman has done something."

Unable to procure a ladder, he returned to the house and was persuaded by the neighbors to break down the door.

After they had obtained entrance to the room, they found Mrs. Fields on the bed partially dressed, inhaling the poisonous fumes from a gas tube which she had connected with a jar and also the fumes from a chloroform bottle. She was unconscious when found but breathing was perceptible.

Dr. Britton was called and stimulants were administered which soon revived the woman. Although very weak, her condition is much improved today.

TAFT VISITS MARION TODAY

TALKS ABOUT THE WEATHER

Thinks its Bad for too Much Embonpoint.

Likes the Busy Aspect of Marion as Viewed From his Special Car and Points Out Local Features as Evidence of Prosperity—Efficient Ruler Accepts Tickets to the Robinson Circus From Wide Awake Press Agent.

Marion received an unexpected visit from President William Taft this morning about 11 o'clock. The president was enroute from Cleveland to Indianapolis on the Big Four, west which is scheduled to be in Marion at 10:02. This morning, however, the train was a great deal behind time, and it was nearly eleven o'clock before the special car of the President stopped at the station. Very few had been notified of the visit and it was only a small crowd that gathered at the back steps of the coach, quite a little way down the track. At first, it seemed as though the men were to be disappointed, but after a short time Mr. Taft appeared on the platform and was greeted with enthusiastic cheers.

"Good morning, gentlemen, good morning," was his greeting as he waved his hand in response to the salute. "I'm very glad to see you this morning even if it is very warm. Aren't you boys glad that you don't have to wear coats this morning. Let me see. This is the home of Warren Harding, isn't it? Well, I was very much interested in his welfare last fall, but my interest didn't seem to help him much. Are you prosperous here in Marion? You are? Well, that's good. Those factories over there would like they mean business. The heat is very great today, isn't it? Especially to big people like me. That reminds me of a story I once heard. Bishop Ryan once asked one of his orators to find him an able assistant. 'I will,' said the priest. 'I'll get you one that is six feet five inches tall. So if he dies by inches you'll have him a long time.' After a few more remarks, the president retired into the car, followed by the cheers and good-wishes of the crowd.

"Well, what do you think of him?" inquired one of the men of a friend. "Well, I guess he's suffering about the same as the rest of us," replied the friend.

Likes Robinson's Circus.

While making the trip from Gallon to this city this morning, President Taft was made the recipient of a block of tickets, good for the season, for the John Robinson circus, which will give two performances next Monday in Marion. One of the circus agents happened to be on the train that was carrying the president, and when the showman heard of Mr. Taft's presence on the train, he lost no time in finding his way to the private car to make the presentation.

While the showman explained his errand to the colored porter, President Taft appeared in the doorway and inquired what was the matter. He was hailed by the circus man, and soon the two were in the private car. "Give Mr. Robinson my sincerest compliments," said the President, "and tell him that I have heard already of his success in the show having this season with the most entertaining program he has framed for the public. I wish the circus was in my vicinity, for I love them, and especially John Robinson's for he and I were long friends in days gone by in Cincinnati."

Mr. Taft explained the show and described its glories to a group of newspaper men who accompanied him on the trip. "I hope everybody for miles around turns out next Monday to see the circus," he told the agent as the latter left the car.

M. matter is on, every little movement has a meaning of its own. About two weeks ago Judge Babst of the common pleas court of this subdivision, ordered Eli M. West, as receiver of the C. D. & M., to turn over to George H. Whysall and Fred E. Guthrie, receivers of the C. M. & B., five work cars.

The C. M. & B. receivers had requested the court to do this and had set out in their application that the cars were simply loaned to the C. D. & M. and that the C. M. & B. now had use for them in filling a contract for transporting a great many tons of crushed stone in Crawford county.

The order was ignored until recently. The receivers of the Bucyrus line thought it might be necessary to cite Mr. West for contempt, but this entanglement and its consequences were avoided by the delivery of the cars to the C. M. & B. and they are now in use on that line.
